

Special edition: the Market and the Environment

The first edition of the Rethinking Economics Australia Student Journal, published in partnership with NCEconomics, will have the special theme, the Market and the Environment.

Submitting a paper of up to 3000-words will give you the opportunity to receive feedback on your abstract from academics, as well as feedback on your paper itself from fellow students.

Several prizes will be awarded by the team at NCEconomics:

- Three $100 prizes for the best submissions under the special theme.
- Two $150 prizes for the best responses to one of the following prompts:
 - Can economics halt biodiversity decline?
 - How can economics improve water quality in the Great Barrier Reef?
 - Why should economics be used to allocate water in the Murray Darling Basin?

Deadline: July 1, 2021

If you also submit a 150-word abstract before the deadline, then you may be able to receive feedback from members of our advisory team, subject to the availability of the advisors.

Submissions should follow the detailed information for authors and can be sent by email, along with any questions you might have, to students@rethinkeconomics.org.au.
